Lifehouse will offer the latest research and technology, advanced medical and complementary therapies, as well as emotional support and sanctuary all in one place with a holistic patient centric model of care providing services for public and private patients. Patient focused care has increasingly demonstrated better patient outcomes in addition to a more effective and efficient health care system. We are not just about building a new facility; we are about creating a new organisation with the patient at the centre of everything we do. The Chris O'Brien Lifehouse at RPA will provide uncompromising care for everyone affected by cancer. This is what drives us and underpins everything we do, a team of people working together to be source of energy, innovation, inspiration, knowledge, guidance and support. Lifehouse at RPA is an independent not-for-profit public benevolent institution. Income will be re-invested to continually innovate and improve services and focus on the delivery of cancer care and research for the benefit of all Australians and the education of the next generation of clinicians and researchers.

Chris O'Brien's Vision

Chris O'Brien (3 Jan 1952 – 4 June 2009) was a man of leadership, vision and courage. He inspired people, both through his work as a cancer specialist and through his own three year battle with an aggressive brain tumour. Chris transformed his personal adversity into a national opportunity, using his experience to fight so much harder for cancer patients and their families. Chris's vision was for an integrated cancer treatment centre so that patients would no longer have to navigate their way through all the different elements of dealing with their illness alone. His vision will be realised with the completion of The Chris O'Brien Lifehouse at RPA in 2013.
